AS THE RESULT OF WAR Merchants Believe Participation of

U. S. in Conflict Adds to Demand for Supplies.

That the entrance of the United States into the war with Germany will mean an increase in the volume of business in Washington is the belief of a number of business men here. It is pointed out that the great additional number of out that the great additional number of clerks and other employes who have been called into service of the federal government will greatly increase the demand for all the necessities of life and will thereby boom trade here. Charles J. Columbus, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, last night, in calling attention to the way in which the warm weather had made business "boom" during the last few days, predicted great prosperity for the National Capital during the next several months.

The hotels and other living places in Washington bave had their capacities tested as never before," he said. "The federal government, the big employer of the National Capital, is adding daily and almost hourly to its list of employes, and in view of this assurance of long-continued activities, it is but quite natural that a feeling of confidence should prevail in Washington."

To Free Interned Sailors' Families. Secretary Wilson has instructed im-migration officials to parole all women and children taken from interned German merchant ships who desire t leave the immigration stations. The women will be released upon their own recognizance and the children will be placed in their custody.

COMING OF CONFEDERATE VETERANS TO WASHINGTON A CALL TO HOSPITALITY

Washington will be on its mettle the first week in June. The Confederate, Veterans are coming here then to their twenty-seventh annual reunion. They have been invited by the civic organizations and by the public at large to come, and they have accepted the invitation. The rest remains for Washington, and there is not the least doubt they Washington will do its part so well that when the least doubt that Washington will do its part so well that when the veterans have folded their tents and returned to their homes they will take with them the most pleasing impressions of the beauty and hospitality of this glorious capital of a reunited country.

Many liberal contributions have been made by business institutions, professional men and generous-hea-ted citizens to the entertainment fund, but the reception and care of the visitors have been projected on so large a scale that more money will be needed to make this great patriotic occasion what it ought to be. There is still opportunity for those who have not yet "done their bit" to take part in the great occasion, and the finance committee of the citizens' association charged with the reunion will make prompt and grateful acknowledgement of all contributions sent to any of its members. The newspapers of the city will also be pleased to receive and acknowledge such contributions made through them for this purpose and turn over the amounts to the finance committee. this purpose and turn over the amounts to the finance committee. The committee does not wish to neglect any one, as in its opinion the reputation of the community for hospitality and good fellow-

There will be thousands of veterans here, and, besides their maids of honor, their sponsors and the Sons and Daughters of Confederate Veterans, there will be still other visitors, making a total, it is estimated, of about one hundred and twenty-five thousand.

The veterans themselves will go into camp on the grand plaza between the Washington terminal station and the United States Capitol. Hundreds of tents will be erected there for them, or such of their number as may prefer the comforts of camp life and the memories of "the brave days of old," when they were under arms, to the softer living of hotels and boarding houses. The veterans at the camp will be supplied with every comfort and luxury the conditions will permit and will be fed in a great mess tent, not on hardtack and roasted corn, as aforetime, but on the best the markets afford.

The committees charged with the reunion intend to make the The committees charged with the reunion intend to make the opening week in the month of June fairly bubbling over with the spirit of patriotism and national sentiment, so that when their work is done the whole country will give praise to Washington and honor to the men who once wore the gray. An elaborate program, now in the making, will provide for indoor and outdoor amusements for every day and night during the reunion, so that the streets and avenues and public places will present a constantly changing panorama of life at its best.

COME ON IN SWIMMIN'. BATHING BEACH OPENS

Washingtonians Have Opportunity Today to Make Fancy Dives and Do Other Stunts.

Weeks earlier than its usual opening Washington's municipal bathing season vill inaugurate its 1917 season today. Hearing the cry along the Potomac and Rock creek of "Come on in; the water's fine," District officials decided on the early pening, believing it might save the live of many who would risk themselves in the river under conditions conducive to cramps and dress on the banks without facilities for drying off and protection against cold.

Frederick J. Brunner, superintendent of the beach and the playground swiftming pools, will be at the beach today to see that the season is ushered in properly From now until the opening of the regular season, which will be determined by lar season, which will be determined by weather conditions, the hours will be from 9 until 5 on week days and 11 until 3 on Sundays. Men only wil be permitted in the pools today, the schedule for women not having been arranged.

J. Emmit Haltigan, last year's head life guard at the beach, again will have charge of the protection of the public. Mr. Brunner, who is coach of the Washington Swimming Club, and also has charge of the swimmers of Central High School, said that there will be a large contingent of aquatic experts from each of these institutions on hand at the beach, from now on to assist in the care of the public.

The work of repairing the bathing beach, public.

The work of repairing the bathing beach which is now going on, will not be interrupted by the swimmers. It is expected that only the largest pool will be used during the early season.

Forty high school cadet officers yes terday received instruction in practica troop leadership in the field, under th direction of Lieut. N. Butler Briscoe U. S. A., instructor of military science in the District's public schools. The boys assembled at the end of the 14th street car line and worked out numerous problems in Rock Creek Park. Some of the boys "defended" the reservoir while others attacked it. Similar work in troop leadership is to be con ducted next Saturday.
